

Reading: ages 4-7

If you're looking for books to provide extra richness and practice, look no further than the ranges below. At Oxford Reading Levels 1-6, these books are phonically-based, meaning that the majority of words are decodable but they do contain a small number of 'context words'. These context words bring extra colour and depth to the stories, helping deepen children's knowledge and understanding.

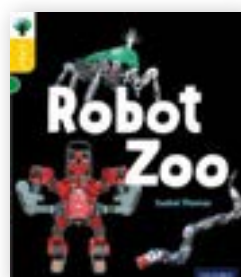

From Oxford Reading Level 8, once children have completed a phonics programme, these books are fully decodable, meaning they are perfect for children who are taking their next steps into independent reading. With captivating stories and enticing non-fiction, these books are bound to have your children asking for more!

- Non-fiction books to inform and intrigue young readers
- Matched to the wider curriculum to support breadth of knowledge
- Powerfully emotive with a compelling mix of personal accounts, lyrical writing and biography

Oxford Reading Level 6: Who Eats Who?

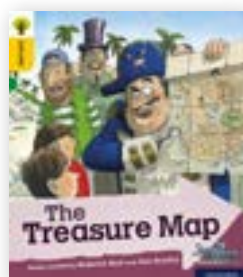

- Features the much-loved characters of Biff, Chip and Kipper

Reading: ages 7-11

Motivating children to read – and sustaining that motivation so that they choose to read often – is much easier to do with bookshelves that are full of a wide variety of rich and diverse books. Providing as many opportunities as possible for children to read and be read to is the single most important and beneficial thing that schools can do. Oxford's wide selection of independent reading books provides pupils with gripping stories, fascinating non-fiction, Classics, graphic texts and much more at just the right level of challenge to keep readers age 7-10 progressing. Browse and ensure reading for pleasure isn't left to chance in your school.

“It is essential that schools plan systematically to nurture pupils' desire to read. It cannot be left to chance.”
